Executive Summary:

The introduction of Right to Information law and increased public awareness of such legislations have proved to be a positive trigger in pushing the governments of Punjab and Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa towards a noticeable shift in rethinking the way, public bodies have been using the web. In result of an overwhelming majority of activists and citizen internet users of Pakistan demanding for better and transparent processes through which public information can be accessed, public bodies have started taking their web presence seriously.

While this is a positive step towards better accountability, the State of Proactive Disclosure of Information in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Punjab Public Bodies' research report results discovered a significant lack of tangible reform adopted to implement key sections of right to information laws adopted by these provinces.

Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Punjab public bodies are required to proactively disclose categories of information mentioned in Sections 5 and 4 of Khyber Pakhtunkhwa Right to Information Act 2013 and Punjab Transparency and Right to Information Act 2013. This report, launched on quarterly basis, seeks to determine the extent to which public bodies in Khyber Pakhtunkhwa and Punjab are implementing relevant sections of their right to information laws and proactively disclosing information with citizens through their web sites.

The results of this report also indicate that not even a single website assessed in the process of developing this report discloses the remunerations, salaries, benefits, and any other such payments public body provides its employed staff, which poses a serious concern of accountability.

The report found that majority of websites surveyed maintained by public bodies to be properly designed and easily accessible by a common citizen with a basic understanding of Internet.

A major concern with regard to the surveyed websites is the absence of information about Public Information Officers responsible to share requested information with citizens and also responsible for the implementation of various provisions, including those pertaining to the proactive disclosure of information. As the report results suggest, websites lack proper sharing of the steps a citizen has to go through in order to access the information shared on self-basis; file the information through a web form or email; the information about how long a citizen should wait for the response; and the next steps in case s/he does not get a response.

Despite a perception that elected governments of Punjab and Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa are leading the technology fora of the country, results indicate a serious lack of promise towards proactively disclosing information on self-basis held by public bodies hold.

Proactive Disclosure Report: Punjab and Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa

Introduction:

In the wake of Snowden revelations, citizens around the world are being more cautious about the information retrieved, stored, and managed by elected public bodies. The ability of having access to public information not only helps citizens in knowing about authorities responsible for different information and public records, but it also helps in the processes of accountability and increased transparency.

In order to have greater accountability and better transparency, there was a need of having a regular checklist that would research on websites of various public bodies, assess the information shared on self-basis, facilitating citizens filing information requests through email or web forms, and provide a clear picture of what is lacking in terms of having a transparent website with thoroughly presented information that the respective public body is holding.

Proactive Disclosure research report aims to take the charge of assessing public websites and showing results on the basis of respective RTI laws implemented in the provinces. This report is exclusively focusing on the provinces of Punjab and Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa as these two are leading the technology arena in the country. Taking help from the respective Khyber-Pakhtunkhwa Right to Information Act 2013, and Punjab Transparency and Right to Information (RTI) Act 2013, this report intends to show the reader results of to what extent public bodies are disclosing required information on self-basis and facilitating citizens filing information requests.

In this report, research has been conducted on categorical basis covering up websites of all the major departments of both the aforementioned provinces. Proactive Disclosure Regional report aims to capture the environment of public bodies through a set of questions taken from the respective laws of the provinces as mentioned above. This report aims to highlight the vast array of relevant categories falling under information required by the government to publicly share or be available to share at citizen requests.

Proactive Disclosure Regional report intends to help identify the governmental departments and ministries openly sharing information with public as per required by the laws. It also helps to identify websites lacking such measures. This report has a potential to help different governmental bodies enhance their websites by sharing relevant information and making their online sites easily accessible and readable by a citizen. The report, thus, will be a quarterly trying to measure any developments that happen to better mirror.

The ratings and scorecards included in this study particularly focus on developments and assessments that took place between the first quarter of 2014, i.e. January 1, 2014 to March 31, 2014.

The numerical scale is further divided in subsets of three: the first range 0 -3 represents “no or very low following of the provision; the second range 4- 7 shows “medium level of representation”; while the last 8 – 10 range shows a very good or maximum level of meeting the criteria taken from either the RTI Acts or used as an additional to further assess the website.
